The New
Double Approach to appreciation of
ENGLISH POETRY

The Book The Records

"Speech, Poetry, and Drama"

by James Shelley

Professor of Education, Lecturer in History of Fine Arts, Canterbury College, University of New Zealand. Well-Known Lecturer in American Universities.

"If we can't teach poetry without strangling the life out of it and mangling its corpse, for Heaven's sake let us leave it alone altogether," educators are desperately driven to exclaim.

Prof. Shelley, realizing that the approach to appreciation of poetry has been too intellectual—the study being limited to the factual content of the verse—offers this entirely new and delightful method.

Here in this written and spoken course the emotions are first aroused—then the study is eagerly pursued by the student as an inquiry to determine why the verse had the effect on him that it did.

Contents

Chapter Headings of the book—which coincide with the titles of the Records—are:

Fact and Feeling
The Music of Words
Word Painting
Picture Poems
Metre and Sound Rhythm
Rhythm and Expression
Time and Dramatic Rhythm
Place of Voice in Literary Appreciation
Spoken Interpretation in Poetry
Constructive Imagination
The Metrical Structure of Poetry
The Perfect Round
Suggestions for Further Study—Notes on the Voice—Index

Poetry is word-music as well as word-language—an influence, an emotion-compelling art that must be heard as well as seen to be appreciated. First read the chapter, then play the record—then read and play again. In this way as in no other are unlocked the hidden treasures that lie in Keats, Shelley, Tennyson, Shakespeare—the great word painters and songsters of our civilization.
